PRIESTS FIGHT ON ROOF OF CHURCH OF NATIVITY

BETHLEHEM (Reuters) - Greek Orthodox and Roman Catholic priests fought with sticks and bottles on Christmas Eve in the Church of the Nativity here—believed to be built over the grotto where Mary gave birth to the infant Christ.

The clash occurred when the Orthodox priests tried to prevent the Catholic ones from standing on the church roof which the Orthodox sect claims belongs to them.

Securities authorities stepped in at once to stop the clash. There were no serious injuries.

Fantastic, colorful, zesty, never a dull moment.

These are the words Frank Rutter has for politics in B.C., and for his job as legislative reporter for the Times-a job which he took on with great misgivings in May, 1960.

But he found himself plunged into the most exciting era in years, a bubbling cauldron of political moves and counter-moves with the "power play" at the focal

"I thought the press gallery might be dull," Rutter admits. "Now the legislative beat has me enthralled."

Frank Rutter had to start from scratch to learn Canadian politics. He first visited this continent in 1952, during a tour of duty with the Royal Air Force, found the land to his liking, and emigrated in 1953.

His first newspaper was the Winnipeg Tribune, where he touched all bases; police, courts, civics, music and movie reviews, literary editor, desk work in various capacities.

In 1958, the call of climate, among other things, drew Frank Rutter to the Times as a desk editor, then legislative reporter. His outside interests incline to the quiet life so readily available in B.C.; with his wife and two children, he lives at Cadboro Bay in a home he helped build (with much moaning and groaning) where a hi-fi set occupies much of his time. He is strong for the arts, especially literature.

He has had to give up painting as a hobby, to devote the time to being a lazy Victorian, thus restoring his tissues after long sessions with the fascinating subject of politics in B.C.

Pension or Bribe?

THE POLITICAL BAROMETER of Canada already points to dirty weather. When Mr. Diefen-baker went to Hamilton the other day to make what he called a "nonpolitical" speech he must have been rather desperate for new material. Finding none, he dredged up the Mackenzie King government's prewar policy on air training and the St. Laurent government's attitude in the Suez crisis.

What have those historical events go to do with the election of The nation's business today s not preparation for the war of 1939 or Suez in 1956. It is the management of the national economy, especially in the fields of finance and trade. But apparently anything goes in an election campaign already under way. After the Hamilton speech we shall hear much more of the same.

One item in that speech, however, is highly relevant today. Mr. Diefenbaker promises another raise in old age pensions. As he found in 1957 and 1958, playing politics with pensions can be profitable.

The Prime Minister boasts that he already has given the pensioners a lot more noney than his predecessor offered, though in fact no government ever gives anything to any-body. Every dollar handed by a rnment to one person is paid by another Governments have no money and create no wealth of their They collect all their expenditures from the taxpayers.

It is unfortunate and dangerous, too, that old age pensions should be come the football of politics—a kind of auction sale at every election.

We think an unanswerable case can be made for higher old age pensions but not under the present system. Merely to raise the monthly pension, without doing anything to support the cost, must contribute to the government's appalling deficits, the disorder of national finance, the high rate of interest, the present rapid inflation of the currency and, through prices, the hardship of the pensioners

What we need in Canada is not another election bribe but an entirely new pension system, above a contributory system under which everybody pays regularly into a central fund during his active life and recaptures his money, with interest, in his old age.

If, in addition, private pensions, managed by business firms, were made "portable" and accompanied the worker from one job to another, then the financial problem of old age would be largely solved.

At the same time the state's financial problem, so far as it conalso. Higher pensions could be provided by the future pensioner's contributions without any extra burden on the government, which is to say the general taxpayer.

Moreover, the pension system would be out in the open, understood by everybody. If the nation wished to increase the pension rate it would know the cost directly. Every citizen could decide whether he wanted to contribute more to his own savings in order to get a larger return AS corresponding secretary of our after his years of work. Increased pensions could no longer be presented every four years as electoral bait. The pensioner would not be a suppliant at the government's feet but an investor who could demand an me. Certainly some older citizens who had not made the contributions all over the country demanded of the younger but tis only fer the would gain an advantage apparently unearned. But the average worker, has surely earned at least a measure of old age security whether he or she has made a certain direct financial contribution or not. The students were honored and delighted when Mr. Diefenbaker paid them a visit the other day. They flocked to hear him speak. Their student paper reported the event: "Prime Minister John Diefenbaker spoke to Dalicusie students and faculty in room 21 last Friday." Then followed three inches of vacant space to indicate the complete nothing that was said. This could be less an insult than an acknowledgement of Mr. Diefen-baker's sagacity. He probably subscribes to the theory that you can always tell a university man—but not much. And how could he show greater confidence in the students and faculty than by providing the opportunity implied in the blank space in the paper? Obviously he was not telling them what to do. He was proffering them an invitation write their own 'icket"—which al o might be a display of self-confidence on Mr. Diefenbaker's part.

FROM ELISABETHVILLE

Behind the Collapse

I in Elisabethville after two weeks battle with the United Nations has struck at much more than the ambition of Mr. Tshombe to set up his in-dependent state. It has punctured the claim that the Katangese forces, advised and officered by Europeans, were invincible, and has exposed the alliances which finally projected Mr. Tshombe into an open war with world opinion. During the final days of the battle, which, on the whole, Katangese soldiers fought bravely, one time and again saw European officers urging Katangese detachments into a final stand in which they were losing heart.

It would have been possible for anybody to enter Katanga possible for anybody to enter Katanga with a quantity of arms in his car, or with any military intention for himself.

Greatest Support

But perhaps the greatest support of all for Mr. Tshombe has been given by the Rhodesian Press, with its headlined accounts of UN "atrocities."

Nobody who has spent the fighting days in Elisabethville can be un-disturbed by the casualties caused by disturbed by the casuattes caused by UN mortaring. Even if Diefenbacer delays the election until 1963, it is doubtful if the new commission would complete its job and Parilament could enact the results before the vote. In 1962 the Liberal government faced a similar problem in Saskatchewan, Its Jack Pickersgill cooked up a solution; an amend ment to the BNA act providing that no province shall lose more than 15 per cent of its seats in redistribution. This has given Saskatchewan two extra seats since 1952, Now that province faces loss of these two extra seats, and two more as well,

No Pickersgillian formula can save the airie seats this time without offending Quebec. In 1952 Quebec gained seats, and was magnanimous about Saskatchewan. This time Quebec stands to lose one seat, and special consideration for the prairies would upset the delicate French-English Best guess is that Diefenbaker intends, if he is returned, to increase the number of Commons seats by at least 20 as the only politically satisfactory solution. This could be justified, aside from political expediency, as a move to give the people better representation in Parliament. In 1946 there was one MP for every 45,000 people; in 1952 one to every 62,000, and if the number of seats is not increased, the new ratio will be one MP for 70,000 people.

An increase in House membership from to 283 would save Saskatchewan one of the two seats it stands to lose on populagrounds, and would save the one seat that Nova Scotia and Manitoba stand to lose. Instead of Quebec losing one, it would gain five. Ontario would gain 11. Al-berta would gain an extra seat and British Columbia, instead of picking up one, would gain three for a total of 25.

Open Spaces Vanishing In Oak Bay

There's a paucity of land in Oak Bay, one of the province's most prosperous urban "dormi-tories".

In terms of undeveloped public land, Oak Bay is down to its last two major subdivisions.

There are 38.5 acres of public land available: two tracts of about 15 acres each and one parcel of 8.5 acres, in all about 100 substantial building lots.

All the land is former Hudon's Bay Co. property in what now referred to as the university area, flanking Hender-son Road south of Cedar Hill

About 100 privately-owned lots are scattered throughout the municipality, including the Uplands. These will go gradu-ally as greater demand pushes ally as greater demand p

Growing scarcity has affected values to the point where property assessme ents have been re-

LOWER TAXES

But even so, taxes in Oak Bay generally are low—among the lowest in the province— greatly enhancing the attrac-tion to homeowners.

Thus the municipality's 2,884 acres have shrunk to 38.5 public acres and about 45 privately-owned acres in the 55 years since incorporation. Growth has been nearly 100 per cent residential, with a bare minimum of commercial.

Just recently approved was subdivision number nine, the 15 acres west of Henderson and south of Cedar Hill Crossroad.

Probably next year another 15 acres east of Henderson will go on the block.

END OF ROAD

And as far as the municipal ibdivision is concerned, it will be the end of the course for this

It will leave a narrow strip of land containing 8.5 acres in the northwest corner of former HBC lands, too small for park use—although parkland in the north end of the municipality is nonexistent—perhaps sult-able for housing, but most likely to be zoned for high-rise apartments or commercial use

This was part of the land purchased by Victoria College for Gordon Head university development, but sold back to Oak Bay for the same price paid to the HBC.

SPECIAL STUDY

Proper use of this strip will be the subject of study by the capital region planning board, said Oak Bay municipal engineer Geoffrey White, one of its members.

Once this small parcel is gone there remain only two large parcels of private land— approximately 10 acres owned by the Hudson's Bay Co. and leased to the Victoria Riding Academy, and about four times as much owned by CJVI, the two plots facing each other on opposite sides of Cedar Hill Crossroad.

They would provide about 125 new building lots, but both most likely would be long-term propositions. The radio sta-tion, at least, has no intention of selling in the foreseeable present rate of development, there will be no open land left.

DEAR ABBY: Your sympa-hetic letter to "Exhausted Believe me, there are none so deaf as those who will not hear. I have heard all the ex-cuses: "I'm too old to learn to use a hearing aid. They're too noisy and make me nervous.

It's all baloney! My aunt ruined her daugh Next in order of hairdressing is setting hair and if you're anything like me there will always be stubborn ends that won't tuck in. My set always seems to turn out fine, anyway, but can't help thinking that maybe if I could get those ends in it would turn out much better.

You can imagine my pleasure when I ran across an automatic pin curier. It works by catching the ends with "circular teeth" and winding from ends to scalp. With this gadget it's possible to get a professional bouffant curl, stand up or page boy.

My aunt ruined her daughter's life because of deafness.

Given in marriage by H. Hardwick, the bride was lovely in a classically styled floor-length gown of brocade in lily of the valley design. Skirt was slightly en train with bustle effect at back. A dainty circlet of pearls held the bouffant veil of illusion tulle. Rose yellow roses were in the cascade bouquet.

Miss Eleanor Liprini, formerly of Cape Town, flew from Montreal to be maid of honor. Her royal blue satingown was in street length and complemented with a pale pink bandeau and cascade bouquet of pink chrysanthemums.

Douglas Hardwick flew from. Toronto to be best man. He was accompanied by another guest, Colin Mason.

CHARLES MONTAIGNE of FRANCE

While many women are still burrowed deep in furs, designers the world over are readying the most delightful spring fashions to be seen in several seasons. Charles Montaigne of Paris gets off to an early start with this beautifully shaped coat swinging out into well-calculated fullness that is controlled by a deep inverted back pleat topped by a bowknot. The serene collarless neckline above a five-button opening invites your favorite scarf, the bound slash pockets add a touch of masterful tailoring. This versatile coat stays casual in wool tweed, goes formal in silk cords, brocade or elegant upholstery fabrics, and makes news in heavy linens or cotton tweeds wherever the sun shines brightest. EDMONTON (CP) - John Langdon, 42, and Blake Mac-Kenzie, 47, both of Edmonton, spent Christmas in Fort Nelson, B.C., after being stranded six days by bad weather in the storied Nahanni River Valley Lengdon and McKenzie left National Butte, N.W.T., 600 mile northwest of Edmonton, Dec. 18 for a 105 mile flight west to McMillan Lake.

They were not heard from until Sunday, when they were spotted near the lake by an RCAF Albatross rescue aircraft from Winnipeg. Macken-zie said Monday in a telephone zie said Monday in a telephone interview he and Langdon were "just preparing to take off when the rescue aircraft arrived." He said they suffered no ill effects while "socked in" and their single-engined Cessna 180 aircraft was not damaged.

The Albatross escorted the Cessna back to Nahanni Butte. The Cessna, owned by a for terson firm, was chartered for Langdon and Mackenzie by Phil Ross Agencies Limited of Edmonton. The two men flew into McMillan Lake to work on a documentary film about the Nahanni Val-

Then there is the case of Halki, who owns and rents donkeys to the prospectors. The Madhya Pradesh state government has let it be known it would like as many diamond-seekers as possible to converge on Panna. Rosy newspaper accounts have also whipped up hope in many a poor home.

It is Panna, where diamonds have been found, attracting hundreds of prospectors who hope to strike it rich overnight.

whipped up hope in many a poor home.

For just one dollar, the state provides the licence and allots a 25-square-foot plot for the prospector to try his luck. All that he needs now is a shovel plus patience.

NEAB SURFACE
Digging with the shovel the prospector hits red gravel only a few feet from the surface. The gravel is collected, washed and dried in the sun. If the gods are kind, a raw diamond may sparkle from the heap. Otherwise, he goes on digging with a prayer on his lips.

Theoretically, it is a hopeless business. There is just one part of diamond for every 34,000,000 parts of ore and to every and the search at the state has also in the business. The cost one part of diamond for every 34,000,000 parts of ore and to every and the state provides the licence and nothing.

Diamond Find in Central India Brings on Flood of Prospectors

By RUKMINI DEVI

BOMBAY (CP) — A sleepy village in central India has be come the focus of national attention.

It is Panna, where diamonds have been found, attracting hundreds of prospectors who hope to strike it rich overnight.

A 500 square mile area around Panna is estimated to contain diamonds of a total weight of 3,000,000 carats. The Madhya Pradesh state government has let it be known it would like as many diamond-seekers as possible to diamond-seekers as possible to There are also men like converge on Panna. NEAR SURFACE

Digging with the shovel the prospector hits red gravel only a few feet from the surface. The gravel is collected, washed and dried in the sun. If the gods are kind, a raw diamond may sparkle from the heap. Otherwise, he goes on digging with a prayer on his lips.

Theoretically, it is a hopeless business. There is just one part of diamond for every 34,000,000 parts of ore and to
